FOREWORD

THE compilation of this book, a work extending over a period of seven years, has been not without some pleasurable incidents in addition to the satisfaction which always comes with getting any job completed.

Persons asked for information have been friendly and unsuspicious usually, but not always. Once while the author and an elderly Swayne were engaged in poring over a family chart, by aid of which relationships were being traced, the good wife of this Swayne appeared in the doorway, very evidently out of harmony with the proceedings. "What's the matter," said she in gloomy tones. Upon being assured—by her husband, not by the author—that nothing was the matter, she moved off, utterly unappeased, remarking as she went, "Well, it's mighty funny when strangers get to writing to each other."

This incident may explain why some of the Swaynes to whom letters were sent have chosen not to answer. It is likely, however, that most of these, a rather small minority of all those who received requests for information, were merely indifferent, and had little information, anyhow.

A letter addressed to Dr. Swayne and Son, of St. Louis, Missouri, brought the astounding news that the writer, who signed himself a Swayne, had been born 1742, married in 1784, never had a father, and that nearly all of his relatives worked as bartenders or other saloon employes, or would have done so if such relatives had existed. Soon after this, newspapers reported that a St. Louis man, whose name was not Swayne, had been fined thirty dollars for adulteration of Swayne's Panacea and other medicines.

Another letter, this one to a New Yorker, brought this reply: "I regret to say that I cannot give you any information which might be of service to you." The name Swayne, although it appeared both in his letter and in the directory, was not on his business card. There, only his Christian name was used.

The two cases just cited suggest that some of those hiding behind our good name did not receive it from their fathers. When it becomes desirable for any person to discard one name and choose another, caution dictates the choice of one which is at least respectable. Those of us who have inherited Swayne as our surname may therefore feel complimented.

At least one Swayne, according to the Louisville, Kentucky directory for 1915 was dark in color. One instance of a slave-holding Swayne is recorded in this book. It is likely there were others. That a freed slave should assume the surname of his former master was usual. It is regrettable that the author was unable to get into correspondence with this negro Swayne.

Many correspondents have shown anxiety—even as great as that of the author—to get in the correct vital statistics for themselves, their ancestors, or their children. Probably the most extreme case was that of a man who suggested the desirability of postponing publication for a few months in order that his expected child might be included. Such people as these show—at least from the genealogist's point of view—a proper pride of race and stability of character.

It must be admitted that a work like this is exceedingly liable to errors. Many of the names and dates have passed through copyings by several hands. In each copying there was the chance of an error in figure or letter, and also the possibility of the incorporation of a new idea in spelling. Where data concerning certain members of a family have been obtained from more than one source, the dates, and even the names, have often differed slightly. In a few cases the discrepancies are utterly irreconcilable. This fact casts doubt upon other data which was gathered from only one source.

Moreover, one can never be sure that such a work is either complete, or up-to-date. There is no doubt whatever that some of Francis Swayne's line are not even named herein. Nor could all of the tribe be expected to refrain from marrying reproducing and dying during the period of compilation.

In spite of these limitations the author hopes that the book may be of interest and of service to the comparatively few Swaynes who are living, and the potentially large number of them yet to live, who may want to learn something about their ancestors and other relatives.

The cost of publishing has been borne principally by 253 Noah Haynes Swayne <sup>6</sup>, who furnished $1075, which was believed to be the balance needed. Three other Swaynes, 254 Francis Bond Swayne <sup>6</sup>, 360 Samuel Edward Swayne <sup>7</sup>, and 438 Albert William Swayne <sup>8</sup>, contributed $100 each. Those who read are indebted to these men.

They are also indebted to the many interested correspondents, who painstakingly copied records from old family Bibles and other sources. Without this co-operation, from widely scattered parts of the country, the genealogy could not have been compiled.

ORIGIN AND DISTRIBUTION OF THE NAME SWAYNE

THE name Swayne apparently comes from various sources, and is but one of a large number of variations. The Anglo-Saxon swàn, a pastoral servant, and the Scandinavian Sweyn or Svein, a proper name originally of the same meaning, have given rise to the names Swayne, Swaine, Swain, Swainson, Swainston, Swanton, Swaysland, and perhaps Swann and Swan. These names implied strength of youth. Sweyne, derived from the Welsh swyn, a charm, has probably been converted into one or more of the other forms. The Irish Suibneach, meaning the spirit of the strawberry plant, was the parent of a large number of variations, including Sweeney, McSweeney, McSwiggin, Swiney, McSwiney, Swain, MacSwain, Swayne, and those names spelled and pronounced similarly. The Scottish MacSweyn was apparently an unusually direct offshoot of the Scandinavian.

So any particular Swayne can hardly be positive from what source his name has been passed down to him. However, the strong probability is that most of us have come from the Scandinavian source. The name, introduced into Great Britain as a Christian name at, or probably before, the time of the Norman conquest, soon developed into a surname. Sweyn and Sweynson had been common in Denmark for ages previous to that. The well known ascendancy of the Danes in Yorkshire from the time of Ethelred, A.D. 868, probably accounts for that district being the principal English habitat of the modern versions of the name. In the eleventh and twelfth centuries Filius Suani and Fitz-Swain are found in England. Early in the twelfth century Adam Fitz-Swain, or Swainson, was lord of Hornby Castle. "You have the advantage, (says the Rev.

THE NAME SWAYNE

Joseph Hunter, addressing one of the family) of having had a line of ancestors living in a good position in the county where Sweyn, the son of Alaric, and Adam, the son of Sweyn, had such large possessions."

The Domesday Book, A.D. 1085, records several persons called Svain, Suain, Suanus, Suuen, Swen, and Sueno, some of whom are specifically stated to have held lands under Edward the Confessor, A.D. 1066 or earlier. The forms in the Rotuli Hundredorum, A.D. 1273, are Le Swein, Le Sweyn, and Sweyn. All of these, including the parent of them, seem now to have practically died out, by being gradually converted into Swayne, Swain, and Swainson, the forms now most in vogue. In England Swayne is the most common, if the British Guide to Relative Precedence and the British Who's Who furnish a reliable index. In the United States of America Swain is probably more frequent. Perhaps geography determines a man's orthographic preference. There are records of brothers who consistently spelled the name differently. In colonial days the name of one man was spelled at different times in two, or even three ways; the man himself was not always consistent in his signature.

Coats of arms were granted to bearers of the name in England at various times, beginning at least as early as A. D. 1444, when one William Swayne received such a grant. This was confirmed more than once, notably an application of Samuel Swain, an alderman of London, who several hundred years later claimed this William Swayne as his ancestor. The descriptions of these coats of arms are in general, but not absolute, agreement.

The name has now spread quite widely in lands inhabited by speakers of English. In the compilation of this book letters were received from Swaynes whose fathers or grandfathers had come to the United States from England, Scotland, Ireland, Australia, Canada and Germany.

SCOPE OF THIS BOOK

THIS book attempts to trace the descent of those Swaynes who have descended from Francis Swayne, born probably about 1660, an emigrant from England who settled in Pennsylvania in the year 1710. More than five hundred descendants bearing his name have been recorded.

There will also be found some other lines, notably that of Abner Swayne, born 1784, who married Anna Nutt, and lived in Virginia, and that of James Swayne, who married Anne Saxton in Delaware, 1805, then died the next year, and so never saw any of his descendants. No connection has been found between these and Francis Swayne. Perhaps they sprung from one or more of a half dozen Swaynes and Swaines, who are recorded as Virginia and Maryland immigrants from 1635 to 1668. There is a chance, too, that they derive their name from one or more of the Swains who settled in Massachusetts in 1635 or earlier. In the lines of Abner and James, and in various other lines, nine in all, over two hundred Swaynes may be found.

LINE OF FRANCIS SWAYNE

I FRANCIS<sup>1</sup> died 1721, married Elizabeth Milton. He was a son of William Swayne, who dwelt at Ockingham (or Wockingham, or Oakingham) in the parish of Bienfield, liberty of Wilts, Berkshire, England. This is about fifteen miles from London.

All we know concerning William is stated in his will, which follows. It was proved in May, 1693, before one Robertus Woodward, by George Frame (or Frome).

COPY OF WILL OF WILLIAM SWAYNE, FATHER OF FRANCIS

Francis about 1690 removed from this parish to Easthamstead Park, parish of Easthamstead, also in Berkshire. Here all of his children were born, excepting William, the eldest.

About 1704 he and his wife became Friends, and when, in 1710, they came to Penn's Woods, as many Friends were doing about that time, they brought a certificate from Reading Monthly Meeting in Berkshire.

In 1711 they obtained from Caleb Pusey 425 acres in East Marlborough Township, Chester County, Pennsylvania. This was on the south side of the Street Road, then Marlborough Street, about 1 and  $\frac{3}{4}$  miles west of what is now Willowdale, and 1 and  $\frac{1}{4}$  miles east of London Grove. The land had evidently been in three lots, deeds for which are as follows:

1st lot—Charles II of England in 1680 to William Penn, by him in 1682 to one Sharpless, by him to John Sharpless, by him in 1701 to Caleb Pusey, by him in 1711 to Francis Swayne.

2nd lot—Charles II in 1680 to William Penn, by him in 1681 to Thomas Brassey, by him to Mary Brassey (Francis Worley her husband), by them in 1707 to Caleb Pusey, by him in 1711 to Francis Swayne.

3rd lot—Charles II in 1680 to William Penn, by him in 1681 to Thomas Brassey, by him to Rebecca Brassey (Thomas Thompson her husband), by them to Caleb Pusey, by him in 1711 to Francis Swayne.

The several farms into which these 425 acres were divided have passed through many hands since then. For several generations they were mostly owned and tilled by Swaynes. In 1918 the part on which was Francis' original homestead was owned by Pennell Taylor.

In addition to being a farmer, Francis was "Practitioner of Medicine." The weighty volume, about the size of a modern unabridged dictionary, from which he perhaps drew much of his medical wisdom, has outlasted him. It was owned in 1920 by Antonio Canova Swayne, of Lansdowne, Pennsylvania.

He was also a "Publick Friend." Many of us who bear his name are still Quakers, and can easily guess what that means. In 1713 he was moved to go on a religious visit. Starting from Philadelphia, he journeyed to Massachusetts and New Hampshire, holding meetings on the way at Flushing, Newport, Dartmouth, Nantucket, Rochester, Falmouth, Barnstable, Sandwich, Yarmouth, Plymouth, Scituate, Boston, Salem, Lynn, Marblehead, Hampton, Amesbury, Newburyport, Portsmouth, etc. Some of these places were visited twice. The journey occupied three months, from July 24th to Oct. 21st.

While in Nantucket he met with a family of the same name as his own who had settled there in 1662 from some town east of Boston. Francis says they proved to have been of the same family in England. (Several Swains went from England to Massachusetts soon after the first settlement there. A Swain Genealogy has been compiled, listing some of their descendants).

There is a family tradition that Francis, while resting under a tree, expressed the wish that his body might rest there forever. At any rate, he was interred in his own land, and the place was used as a family cemetery until about 1804, eighty-three years later. No tree is there now. The location of the stone wall which formerly surrounded the plot is sometimes revealed by the plow.

2 WILLIAM<sup>2</sup>, born 1689, died 1735, eldest child of 1 Francis<sup>1</sup>, was the first of our line to reach America. He came on the ship Saulsbury, landing at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Sept. 15, 1708. Here is his own account:

"William Swayne, son of Francis 1st and Elizabeth, born the 30th day 1st mo. 1689 in the Kingdom of England and in Barks Shire and parish of Binfield whence my father removed to Easthamstead Park in yr Shire aforesd and had six children born to him in Easthamstead parish and about the year 1704 my father and mother and myself were convinced and received the truth and in the year 1707 by the consent of my father and mother I went to London in order to go to Pennsylvania, my father having both taken my passage and paid for it I went on board in the 7th mo. 1707 with my tender parents and then they left me on board the West River Merchant, bound for West River in Maryland, and under convoy of a man of war, by which & contrary winds the vessel was detained about the Coast of England until yr. 1st mo. following. By this time my great heat and desire to transport myself to Pennsylvania was abated and so I returned home to my friends but in a little time it rose again and I went to Bristol and there went on board of ship called the Salsbury and in five weeks and four days we arrived at the American Shore and landed at Philadelphia on the 15th day of yr 9 mo. 1708 and in about a year and a half after, my tender parents and brothers and sisters arrived here also, and father purchased 425 acres of land in Marlborough Township in Chester county in Pennsylvania."

In 1717 William received from his father 195 of these acres. In 1720 he married Elizabeth Dell, born 1697, died 1743, daughter of Thomas Dell and Mary Eldershaw of Ridley. She survived him eight years, dying when the youngest of their nine children was about eight years old. William was a trustee of London Grove Meeting.

- 3 ELIZABETH <sup>2</sup>, born 1692, 2nd child of 1 Francis <sup>1</sup>, married 1715 Thomas Barnard, son of Richard Barnard and Frances, of Aston, but had no children.
- 4 ANN <sup>2</sup>, born 1694, 3rd child of 1 Francis <sup>1</sup>, died young.
- 5 FRANCIS <sup>2</sup>, born 1697, 4th child of 1 Francis <sup>1</sup>, married 1724 Hester Dicks, daughter of Peter Dicks of Providence, now in Delaware County, Pennsylvania. He was a farmer in West Caln Township, Chester County, Pennsylvania. There were six children.

they were sweethearts in England. (She was ten when she emigrated, and he thirteen). They built a house just west of London Grove, Pennsylvania. The chimney was standing in 1915. Of their nine children,—Robert—William—Ann—Elizabeth—Francis—John—Thomas—Josiah—Sarah—born from 1723 to 1741, all grew up and married, and most of them raised large families. Six of the nine were sons, so that the name of Lamborn was given a good start. The Lamborn Genealogy begins with Robert and Sarah, and records several thousands of their descendants.

- 8 EDWARD<sup>2</sup>, born 1702, died 1776, 7th and last child of 1 Francis<sup>1</sup>, married 1728 Sarah Fincher, born 1708, died 1804, daughter of John Fincher of London Grove. Although he lived to be seventy-four, his wife survived him twenty-eight years, dying in 1804, aged about ninety-six, having outlived nearly all of the third generation of Swaynes. She was probably the last one laid at rest in the family cemetery.

Once, 1766, he is called "saddle tree maker." He and his wife were members of Kennett Monthly Meeting, and are buried there. They had nine children. Their descendants are in the Baily Genealogy.

1815 Samuel was made an overseer of Center Preparative Meeting, at Winchester. In 1825 he and his wife, with their children, took a certificate to Stillwater Monthly Meeting in Guernsey County, Ohio. They had fourteen children, seven of each sex, the largest family recorded in this book.

His wife also died in Tennessee, at Paris, Henry County. They had seven children.
- 135 THOMAS <sup>5</sup>, born 1792, died 1858, 4th child of 70 Joshua <sup>4</sup>, married 1825 Eliza Smith, born 1797, died 1877, daughter of James Smith and Mary, of West Marlborough Township, Chester County, Pennsylvania. In 1824 Thomas was granted a certificate to Caesar's Creek Monthly Meeting, in Ohio. Two years later a committee of Fairfax Monthly Meeting, in Virginia, after trying to get him to "settle his business in this neighborhood," "produced a testimony against him, which was approved by the meeting." He lived in Belmont and Harrison Counties, Ohio, where he had five children.

- 139 ANN <sup>5</sup>, born 1802, 8th child of 70 Joshua <sup>4</sup>, apparently died young, as no mention is made of her in the certificate with which her mother moved to Alexandria Monthly Meeting in 1817. Joshua and Noah Haynes are mentioned.
- 140 NOAH HAYNES <sup>5</sup>, born 1804, died 1884, 9th and last child of Joshua <sup>4</sup>, married 1832 Sarah Ann St. Clair Wager, died about 1882. This man was the most eminent of the Swaynes recorded in this book.

At four, his father died. At thirteen he entered the academy of Jacob Mendenhall at Waterford, Virginia. Two years later he began to study medicine with Dr. George A. Thornton, of Alexandria. But Dr. Thornton died, and partly for this reason, Noah turned to the law. At Alexandria he prepared for college, but the family lost some money, so instead of college he entered the law office of John Scott and Francis P. Brooks, at Warrenton.

Upon being admitted to the bar, he moved to Ohio, impelled by the strong anti-slavery sentiment then held by most Quakers. This was about 1825. For a year he lived at Zanesville, than at Coshocton, where he opened his first office. In 1826 he was appointed county prosecuting attorney. In 1829 he went to the Ohio legislature. In 1831 he was appointed United States Attorney for the District of Ohio. This caused him to move to Columbus. Just previous to this, in 1830, Alexandria Monthly Meeting disowned him for some reason. When he married, in 1832, he thereby became owner of a large number of slaves. These were at once set free, by common consent of husband and wife.

For about thirty years Noah gave attention to private practice, although he was at various times called to public services, which calls he accepted some times, but not always. In this practice, from 1839 to 1852, he was associated with James E. Bates; from 1853 to 1860, with Llewellyn Baber; and from 1860 to 1861, with his own eldest son, John Wager Swayne.

In 1862 President Lincoln, following the decidedly expressed wishes of the judges and lawyers of the Sixth Circuit, appointed Noah Haynes Swayne to the United States Supreme Court. There he served for nineteen years. After his resignation he lived in Washington until the death of his wife, then in New York City with his daughter. There he died, surrounded by all five of his children.

Noah was an ardent student of ancient and modern literature. Perhaps this fact, in connection with his long and satisfactory public services, influenced Yale, Dartmouth, and Marietta Colleges in conferring upon him, at various times, the degree of LL.D.

701 JAMES <sup>1</sup>, died 1806, married 1805 Anne Saxton. This marriage took place in Delaware. James died six months later, before the birth of his son. His widow married Alexander Draper, of Smyrna, Delaware, who was her third husband. He had a ship yard, probably at Smyrna.

A grand-daughter of James, 707 Sarah Gough <sup>3</sup>, thinks he was married only once, as she never heard of a former marriage. If this is correct, James was born probably about 1780. 713 Henry Dail <sup>4</sup>, says his ancestors came from England and settled in Pennsylvania, which makes it seem likely that James and his descendants belong in the line of 1 Francis.

702 JAMES DRAPER <sup>2</sup>, born 1806, died 1877, married 1830 Sarah Clark, born 1808, died 1877. He was the only child of 701 James <sup>1</sup>. He was raised in Smyrna, Delaware, and when grown moved to Baltimore County, Maryland, where he was a magistrate at the time of his death.

704 JOHN REESE <sup>3</sup>, born 1840, died 1877, 2nd child of 702 James Draper <sup>2</sup>, married 1865 Sophia L., born 1847. They had three children.

705 JAMES DRAPER <sup>3</sup>, born 1842, died 1915, 3rd child of 702 James Draper <sup>2</sup>, married 1874 Sarah Blanche, born 1853. He was a produce dealer in Baltimore, Maryland. There were six children.

706 GEORGE THOMAS <sup>3</sup>, born 1845, died 1890, 4th child of 702 James Draper <sup>2</sup>, married 1868 Mary L., born 1846. They had five children.

- 801 JAMES<sup>1</sup>, born probably about 1800, married Elizabeth Shepard, died 1864. He owned a tobacco plantation in Bedford County, Virginia. The widow of his son, 802 Lafayette Perry<sup>2</sup>, says she believes James was either a brother or cousin of 140 Noah Haynes, the U. S. Supreme Court Justice. If this be true all of his line belong in the line of 1 Francis. James' children were all born in Bedford County. After his death the plantation was sold and the family went to Lynchburg, Virginia, to educate the children.
- 802 LAFAYETTE PERRY<sup>2</sup>, born 1826, died 1909, 1st child of 801 James<sup>1</sup>, married 1867 Fannie Roberson. He took his mother and sister 806 Martha Elizabeth to Cairo, Illinois, where they lived until the sister died of consumption and the mother of smallpox, both in 1864. He married at Cairo. He lived for twenty-three years at Kansas City, Missouri. He was a merchant. In 1920 Lafayette Perry's widow was living at Springfield, Missouri.
